Fresh Beer From Here

The Ohio Hop Growers Guild has teamed up with Cincinnati's HighGrain Brewing to put on the inaugural Ohio Fresh Hop Festival on Saturday, Oct. 14 from 1-8 p.m. Fifteen Ohio breweries are showing off beers made with fresh hops grown at Ohio farms at this first-of-its-kind event to be held in Ohio.

Most beers are made with kiln-dried, pelletized hops sourced from around the world. However, during harvest season, brewers have the opportunity to brew beer with freshly picked, unprocessed hop cones. The harvested hops need to be used immediately to maximize flavor and aroma, so partnerships between breweries and local growers are crucial to produce these once-a-year beers. Fresh hop beers are the truest expression of the ingredient, offering a unique drinking experience that cannot be replicated with dried hops.

Ohio Fresh Hop Festival tickets are available in three tiers priced from $20-45 that include tickets for beer samples, a 5 oz. sampling glass, a pint of beer from the HighGrain taproom and an optional festival T-shirt. Learn more and get your tickets at highgrainbrewing.com/ohiofreshhopfestival
