Cincinnati craft brewery Rhinegeist makes interim CEO Adam Bankovich's role permanent

Adam Bankovich is Rhinegeist's CEO.

By Andy Brownfield – Managing editor, Cincinnati Business Courier Oct 17, 2023

The interim leader of Cincinnati's largest craft brewery is taking on the role in a more permanent capacity. Over-the-Rhine-based Rhinegeist announced Oct. 17 that Adam Bankovich had been named CEO, effective Oct. 13. He had been serving as interim CEO since April of this year.

Brewery co-founder Bryant Goulding, who created Rhinegeist with Bob Bonder in 2013, said in a news release that the beer maker's leadership took a comprehensive look at many candidates, but ultimately decided Bankovich was the best fit.

"Adam asks a lot of questions and uses clarity and understanding to get the most out of his team," Goulding said. "It's been really exciting to watch our company blossom under his guidance as we've navigated another challenging year."

Bankovich first joined the brewery in October 2022 as its chief commercial officer. He came from San Diego's Stone Brewing, a titan of the craft beer industry, where he was vice president of sales. Rhinegeist initially brought him on to oversee its commercial strategies and overall growth.

Rhinegeist sold 106,140 barrels of its craft beer in 2022.

Rhinegeist is by far Cincinnati's largest craft brewery, according to Courier research, selling 106,140 barrels in 2022. The region's second-largest brewery, MadTree Brewing, sold 18,204 in that year.

Rhinegeist is the 23rd-largest craft brewery in the nation in 2023, according to the Brewers Association, up two spots from 25th last year.

Bankovich initially took over as interim CEO from Mike Parks, who joined the brewery in August 2021 as the first-ever outside CEO.

"The past year at Rhinegeist has been one of the most fast-paced and exciting of my career, for all the best reasons," Bankovich said in the news release.

Rhinegeist on Oct. 17 announced a slew of other leadership changes:

- Cole Hackbarth, formerly director of brewery operations, was named vice president of brewery operations. He joined Rhinegeist in 2015, growing production from 10,000 barrels a year to more than 100,000. He oversees brewing, quality, packaging, maintenance, and engineering.
- Marc Venegoni, formerly director of national accounts, has been named vice president of sales. He has more than two decades of beer industry experience, on the buyers' side with retail chains, as well as in leadership roles at MillerCoors, Founders Brewing and BrewDog.
- Tracey Ireland, formerly director of marketing, has been named vice president of marketing. With the brewery eight years, she leads brand strategy and creative marketing for Rhinegeist.
